P. J. Spillane Company has been providing building restoration, masonry, and waterproofing services for over 85 years. They are passionate about both maintaining Boston's historic landmarks and building the future with their new-construction services. Sarah Spillane is the CEO.

Can you tell us about the history of your company?

I'm proud to carry on the Spillane tradition that spans three generations. My grandfather, Patrick Joseph, started the company in 1932 as a window installation and repair contractor. My father, Richard, later expanded our services to include waterproofing and restoration. Over the years, we have grown into a multi-faceted, union contractor providing a wide range of services with our knowledgeable, skilled, and trusted employees.

What is your role within the company?

For over 20 years, I've served in various roles in all areas of the business. In 2005, I assumed leadership, and to this day, I'm responsible for providing the vision and strategic direction of the company, preserving the corporate culture, managing the finances, and overseeing the day-to-day operations in our 100+ employee organization.

How are you different from other contractors?

Our breadth of experience and certification as a Woman Business Enterprise (WBE) sets us apart from our competition. To this day, we maintain the beliefs the company was built upon; our commitment to quality, integrity, and value.
