

I would like to take the time to comment about Doc Watts. With having over 20 years' experience in the electrical field, I have always found it to be a challenge to find an electrical contractor with the same standards I have and expect.

The questions I want know:

Do they have the hands on experience?

Are they efficient?

Do they have good work ethics?

How are they with customer service?

How will they react under pressure?

Are their prices competitive and fair?

The answer is YES to all of these questions concerning Doc Watts. As an electrician myself, I have been asked quite frequently if I knew of a contractor that I would recommend. Well, without hesitation, the answer will always be Doc Watts.

Before find out about Doc Watts, we hired a different electrical contractor for a large project. After that company finished the contracted project, we had a few changer orders. After receiving their estimate, we felt they were too high in price. I called Doc Watts for a bid for the exact same change orders and found them to be very reasonable. They were granted the job and we are more than pleased with their performance. They were very detailed, efficient and performed a quality job. I enjoyed working with them and will continue to use and recommend them

Thanks,
