To whom it may concern,

I am responsible for Single-Ply Roofing and Project Management for a large roofing contractor servicing all 50 states. Tamco Construction was recently hired by Insulated Roofing to remove 27 large rooftop units, curbs, supports, and ductwork from a Macy's Distribution Center in the Baltimore, Maryland area.

Their scope of work included dismantling of the units, lifting from the roof, and offsite disposal. Because this was a distribution center, there were a lot of obstacles to overcome including traffic, work hours, safety, and possible interior damage while opening the building to the elements. They completed these tasks without incident and without any safety issues.

I can attest that Tamco is a very professional and well run operation. Their management, their supervision and their crews were very professional and completed this project for us in a very timely and safe manner. They brought a level of expertise to the project that was most impressive.

They have ample labor forces, equipment, and tools to produce the work as specified and contracted. They were on site daily and manage their work professionally.

I heartily recommend them to perform quality work and look forward to working with them again in the future.
